Within all of us monsters breed. They are hidden from the world, cast aside and neglected as though they are of no importance. Hidden beneath our shrouds of civilization and epidermal cloaks, our monsters accumulate. What happens when you remove these coverings? Are you prepared for what you will see? None of us really are. We are bound by ethical consciousness and moral standards. No longer will I sit idly by as scores of drones are sent through the system to further support the machine. No longer will I confine my monsters.
